

How well do we actually know each other?

You must be smart and see through what is true and what is false about each other. A fun way to learn new things about your classmates.

- Plan time and place
- Divide the class randomly into groups of five
- Everyone in the group now takes turns telling three things about themselves – two of them are true and the third is false
- It may statements such as "I have been in a hot air balloon" or "I have seen the Star Wars-movies 12 times"
- Every time a person has told three things, the others in the group should work together to find out which two statements are true
